DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Herring House is a two-story frame dwelling built with beaded weatherboards on a Flemish bond brick foundation. The south (front) facade is five bays wide with a central entrance surmounted by a four-light transom. A single-story porch with a hip roof which carries around the front and the east gable end is a twentieth century addition. The east and west ends each have two bays separated by a step-shouldered chimney of brick laid in Flemish bond with a molded cap. The west chimney contains a brick dated 1801. The rather narrow windows have nine-over-nine sash in the first story and nineover-six in the second. The ornament of the handsome cornice is most curious. Apparently when the weatherboards just below the cornice were replaced, the rear sections of the modillions were cut off, leaving a peculiar row of modillion ends suspended from the cornice.

The interior has a center-passage plan with a large parlor on either side. The open-string stair features curvilinear brackets and a simple balustrade with posts and balusters square in section. It rises from the left side of the main hall in two flights. The east room contains a secondary enclosed stair which ascends to the second level.

The walls in the hall are plastered above a flat-panel wainscot while the rest of the house has plaster walls above and below a molded chair rail. The attic is unfinished.

The mantels are of typical Federal design, each individualized with gouged and carved ornament. The most elaborate is of modified three-part form, with the center tablet no wider than the end blocks. It features fluted pilasters beneath a horizontal lower frieze band adorned with gougework scallops, a motif repeated on the frieze blocks, and an intricate gouged cornice. The other mantels feature end blocks only, with various combinations of gouge and fretwork.

Of particular interest is an early cupboard, located at the head of the secondary stair next to the partition wall. It rises to the ceiling and is capped by a dentil cornice. The side facing the stair is flat-paneled. The accessible side has two doors: a small lower door with two flat panels, the upper with the normal six-panel arrangement.
